Program Schedule

March 3, 2012

File Organization

Information gathered from a multitude of sources--paper from library research trips, letters, emails, family stories, documents, photos, Internet downloads, images from digital cameras, and images scanned to computer--is most useful and easily found again when it's organized in an orderly and logical way.

This class will demonstrate various ways to organize a collection, reduce piles of paper, and put information in a format that can be used as a foundation for a family history book or CD/DVD. Class meets in the large meeting room in the lower level.

March 17, 2012

Tips for Successful Searches using Ancestry

Learn how to search Ancestry's 6 billion records more effectively. This class offers online instruction using Ancestry's Learning Center and hands-on experience. Guided instruction with a group leader is used with a handout.

Class meets in the computer lab on the second floor. Ten computers are available. Class limited to sixteen. Stations can be shared or bring a personal laptop.

March 31, 2012

What is a "Reasonably Exhaustive Search"?

How do you know when you've searched enough? Genealogy lecturer, Michael Hait, explains direct, indirect and negative evidence in a webinar format. A reasonably exhaustive search is demonstrated using an actual case study.

Handouts and a moderated discussion with a group leader will follow the webinar. Class meets in the large meeting room in the lower level.

You may attend any or all of these classes.
